

AL FOXX PRESENTS...

Working Alongside People With Disabilities

A 45 to 90 minute presentation that disables the myths surrounding disabilities.

Employers: If you employ people with disabilities, here is the perfect talk to help everyone in your organization fulfill the spirit of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA).

Have you ever felt a bit uncomfortable working with or approaching people with disabilities? If you have ever wondered how to interact with someone who has disabilities, you'll appreciate Al Foxx's candid insights and practical down to earth suggestions. These suggestions can help fellow employees understand and appreciate the special gifts, skills, talents and abilities of those with disabilities.

Al knows first hand what people with disabilities would like everyone to know. You'll see how thinking of someone as a person with disabilities effects your attitude toward them one way while thinking of them as a disabled person effects your attitude in a different way.

Some of this world's greatest artists, scientists, inventors, mathematicians and actors have had disabilities. People like: Steven Hawking, Leonardo Da Vinci, Thomas Edison, Henry Ford, Tom Cruise, Christopher Reeves, the list goes on.

You'll Gain Immediately-Practical Tips On How To...

- Interact with anyone who has a disability—from dyslexia to speech impairment to wheelchair users
- Learn what to say and not say, learn what questions to ask and not ask to help your interactions with people who have disabilities be mutually comfortable.
- Listen and converse with those with speech impairments
- Communicate confidently with wheelchair users
